Giant hogweed (Heracleum mantegazzianum) is an invasive, non-native plant from Eurasia that was first identified in Connecticut in 2001. This Federal Noxious Weed has now been confirmed in 25 towns in all 8 counties, with many of the populations under control. Giant hogweed is also one of 97 plants on the Connecticut Invasive Plant List, which can be found on the Connecticut Invasive Plant Working Group (CIPWG) website. Educational outreach is underway to alert the public about giant hogweed, its serious health hazards, and provide control options.

Needs Assessment Survey - UConn Nursery IPM Program 2015 Now Open!

Dr. Alejandro Chiriboga, Visiting Assistant Extension Educator at the University of Connecticut, Department of Plant Science and Landscape Architecture, is conducting an online Needs Assessment Survey which attempts to clarify the current Integrated Pest Management (IPM) training needs for the Nursery Industry in Connecticut. With your assistance we will be able to determine the relative importance of key management issues you face and determine where to focus our efforts.

Please take this brief one-time only survey which should only take about 10-12 minutes, but the results will provide valuable information to the UConn Nursery IPM Program.

Your Anonymous Survey Link:

https://uconn.co1.qualtrics.com/SE/?SID=SV_9mfrlwVHkieVII1

Or you can copy this link, then paste it into an email or website.

This survey will remain open from June 1 to August 31, 2015.

Thank you in advance for your input and time!
